THE CHALLENGE

COVID-19 and Community Safety

The Town of Griffith, Indiana, has population of around 16,000 and wanted to test 146 essential workers including their Police, Fire and Municipal workforce. It was important to the Town president, Rick Ryfa, that they test frontline workers for COVID-19 antibodies as part of their goal to prevent the spread of COVID-19 to others in the community.

OUR SOLUTION

Onsite COVID-19 Antibody Testing

Total Safety created a plan to test the Town of Griffith's employees for COVID-19 antibodies. Our team consisted of qualified medical professionals including a paramedic an Advanced EMT and administrative support to set up a testing location at the Griffith City police station over two days.

Upon entrance to the testing site, each employee had their temperature taken and answered a health screen. Next, our paramedic administered a quick and easy "finger-stick" to collect a small blood sample for the COVID-19 antibody test strip. In less than 10 minutes an easy to read negative or positive result was revealed. Each employee received a printout of their official result.

THE RESULT

Getting Back to Work with Total Safety

Out of 146 people tested 3 had been previously diagnosed with COVID-19. The antibody test for these same three people also showed a positive immunoglobulin (IgG) result. This test result indicated that the person had in fact recovered from a COVID-19 infection. This showed the Total Safety's Antibody tests were 100% accurate.

The positive impact of employees knowing their result of COVID-19 antibody test helped them feel confident about getting back to work, knowing they were not a danger to their community for spreading the coronavirus.

Worker wellbeing is what drives Total Safety to be one of the safest companies in the world and we are working hard to get American businesses back to work safely.
