Health Compliance Officer

Protect Worker Wellbeing & Promote Compliance.

It can be challenging for operations managers to comply and enforce the increasingly complex set of guidelines passed by local agencies, the EEOC, CDC, and OSHA for epidemic prevention. Especially in industrial plants where people work in close proximity to one another, high traffic areas such as breakrooms and entry/exit ways make social distancing and disinfection schedules difficult to manage. Total Safety has created the Health Compliance Officer (HCO) position to bridge the gap between your specific jobsite environments, and local mandates, to reduce liability and create a healthier workplace.

Our HCOs are trained in current pandemic workplace guidelines and they have the leadership skills to adequately address issues with the management team on current health compliance. They will provide sound recommendations that can be quickly implemented, checked, and reported.

The HCO creates a culture of compliance by educating employees on the latest best practices, monitoring compliance adherence, and delivering daily reports on how well implemented protocols are followed. Having the HCO on your jobsite can make a significant difference in creating a healthy professionally managed jobsite that increases employee participation and improves morale.
